

Back for Christmas

After their second marriage, William Barclay Jr. and his wife, the former Helen Timmerman Barclay Johnson.

The Barclays—They'll Be Home for Christmas

It has turned out to be a very clubby Christmas for the socialite William L. Barclays, and all because the former Helen Timmerman got to thinking about other Christmases and decided to come back to the husband she divorced to marry another.

Helen, who had divorced Barclay, an electrical engineer, earlier this year to marry W. Ogden Johnson, consulting engineer, divorced Johnson this month to remarry Barclay a few minutes later, explaining:

"I guess my first love was my true one."

Children Instrumental.

The Barclays had been married 20 years before their divorce last April, and they have two children, William L. Barclay 3d, 19, and Barbara, 14, who, it develops, were quietly instrumental in effecting the reconciliation between their parents.

"The children," said Helen, "will be home for Christmas now."

It would have been the Barclays first Christmas apart. Helen got her divorce from Barclay on grounds of mental cruelty, later divorcing Johnson on similar grounds.

The Barclays were remarried by Justice of the Peace Laurence Layman in Reno, across the street from the courthouse where she had Watch Your Language!

Vancouver, B. C.—Goodwin Landevik was highly indignant in court here. He was charged with retaining a stolen jacket.

"I wasn't retaining it," he told the judge. "I stole it."

Landevik, convicted of theft, was sentenced to four months in jail.

just shed Johnson, her husband of some eight months.

Just before Justice Layman tied the knot, Helen turned to friends and said:

"This will correct all those other mistakes. We decided that we would be happier together and Reno was the place to straighten things out."

Try Goldilocks?

Indianapolis. — Charles Burris would like to meet the person who comes to dinner in his home. Burris told police someone has broken into his home three times in 10 days, fixed a meal each time, eaten it and left without disturbing any

Sunday News
New York, NY
Sunday, December 25, 1949

Page 3, Columns 1 and 2