

B. M. LOMBARD DIES AT BERKELEY, CAL.

Word of the death on Monday of B. M. Lombard at his home, 52 Eucalyptus road, Berkeley, Cal., reached Portland friends during the day and served to recall vividly the many years of his life spent in Portland.

Lombard was born in Galesburg, Ill., about 53 years ago. It was there his father founded and endowed Lombard college, still an important institution. After being graduated from the United States naval academy at Annapolis, Lombard served two years in the navy before he resigned and came to Portland to establish his residence in 1887. Here he was graduated in the law school of the University of Oregon and commenced a practice in which he engaged for several years prior to the outbreak of the Spanish-American war.

In that war he served as a navy lieutenant under Admiral Dewey at Manila and was later stationed in China. After the war he returned to Portland where he had much realty.

After his marriage in 1904 to Miss Caroline Sloane of New York the Lombard home was maintained at 800 Hancock street, Portland, until 1914, when the family removed to California. In his life in Portland Lombard devoted much time to the development of residence districts.

Aside from Mrs. Lombard he is survived by two daughters, Frances Sloane Lombard and Lottie Matthews Lombard and one son, John Curtis Lombard, all at the Berkeley home, and a brother, Charles H. Lombard, Dallas, Texas.
